SAN DIEGO ARCHITECTURAL FOUNDATION

The population of the San Diego County is expected to increase 30 percent by 2050, adding one million new residents who will require 330,000 new housing units to live in. While downtown San Diego has been the focus of most high-density development, when fully built out it will accommodate no more than 90,000 to 100,000 additional residents. That means San Diego's other neighborhoods will need to house 80 percent of the city's new residents.

The San Diego Architectural Foundation (SDAF), through its annual Context Vol. 4 program, will focus on how over the next decade well-designed, denser neighborhoods can improve the quality of life as well as environmental and economic prospects for all San Diegans. CV4 will focus on the most personal aspects of these changes to our neighborhoods--housing. Through presentations, lectures, panel discussions and exhibits, CV4 will explore both existing and new housing types, typologies and solutions, from infill housing, micro units and shared-living, to secondary units or 'granny flats,' and beyond.

MISSION & GOALS

Mission Statement: To demonstrate how well-designed, denser neighborhoods can improve the quality of life, economic prospects and cultural vitality for all San Diegans.

Goal External: To change the negative public perception of new development in older communities and to humanize the problems opposition to density and development causes by emphasizing homes not housing units and jobs not companies.

Goal Internal: To broaden the membership and reach of the San Diego Architectural Foundation.

IDEAS

Author Vishaan Chakrabarti argues that hyperdensity is the solution to a host of problems, including “economic stagnation, our rising seas, our spiraling health care costs, our vulnerability to petro-dictators and our free-fall into a sprawling national deficit.”

“The rise of creative class as an economic force were the underlying factors powering so many of the seemingly unrelated and epiphenomenal trends we had been witnessing, from the ascent of new industries and businesses, to changes in the way we live and work”.

“Low-income and middle-class families are being hit hardest, and impacts of the housing deficit could become increasingly visible as more people are forced to double up” - San Diego Housing Crisis Drives Some To Relocate, Others To Invest

“In dollar terms, we learned that each year Californians pay $50 billion more for housing than they are able to afford. In total, California’s housing shortage costs the state more than $140 billion per year in lost economic output, including lost construction investment as well as foregone consumption of goods and services because Californians spend so much of their income on housing.”

“ULI believes that delivering density will be a crucial part of successful urban futures. However, the term itself has different connotations in different parts of the world and the understanding of the economics, planning implications and customer satisfaction of delivering dense development is at very different stages in different cities”.

PROGRAM

Context Vol. 4 will explore creative planning and design solutions that increase density and will improve San Diego's quality of life, and urban, cultural and economic vitality. Higher density, through good, thoughtful design and Smart Growth policies, when done right, can revitalize our existing communities and make San Diego a healthier, savvier and more affordable place to live.

Context Vol. 4 will convene a panel of architects, educators, developers and planners who will show, through example of both built and visionary solutions for the orderly increase of density through thoughtful, credible and potential design.

The committee envisions the following general outline for the program:

1. SDAF, in co-ordination with University of California, San Diego (UCSD) Bioregional Center for Sustainability Science, Planning and Design, will produce and distribute a San Diego countywide survey on housing and neighborhoods to flesh out the current issues and possible solutions for the next 10-plus years.
2. On June 6, 2017, a free and open-to-the-general-public two-hour event will begin with a short lecture that disseminates the analysis of the survey and will be followed by an open discussion on the future of development in San Diego's neighborhoods over next 10 years.
3. This open event will be followed by an evening program that starts with a paid pre-event cocktail party and 'Taste of the Neighborhoods' reception held at the UCSD Great Hall. The reception will encourage participants and panelists to interact and discuss relevant issues in a relaxed, congenial environment. Following the reception, a paid evening forum of practitioners, developers (local and national), academic experts, and civic leaders will discuss distinctive accomplishments in achieving higher density with design excellence that can serve as examples for San Diego's planners, architects and developers.
4. In the spring of 2018, a free and open-to-the-general-public exhibit of potential design solutions for denser San Diego neighborhoods based on the survey results. This exhibit will be produced by local architecture, design and urban planning schools.

CONTEXT IS A FORUM CREATED BY THE SAN DIEGO ARCHITECTURAL FOUNDATION'S COMMITMENT TO KEEPING THE CONVERSATION ALIVE ABOUT THE VALUE OF EXCELLENCE IN THE BUILT ENVIRONMENT.

The San Diego Architectural Foundation is dedicated to education and the promotion of outstanding architecture, planning and urban design throughout the San Diego region.

The San Diego Architectural Foundation (SDAF) is an independent, 501c3 nonprofit organization founded in 1980 by Ed and Barbara Malone. SDAF has become a membership organization, the host of Orchids & Onions, PechaKucha Night San Diego, Inside the Design Studio, architectural tours, film screenings and many other unique and educational programs designed to raise awareness about, and inspire excellence in San Diego's built environment.

San Diego is consistently growing, densifying and redeveloping. It is easy to assume that the quality of our buildings and urban design is beyond our control or in someone else's hands. But the reality is that we all play a role in shaping our built environment. We must be aware, appreciative and be involved in the design of our environment in order to ensure that the ongoing evolution of our city and our region creates a heritage worthy of future generations.

By educating our community and encouraging awareness of the importance of our built environment, SDAF strives to improve the quality of life for all San Diego.

On a last note: become a SDAF member, volunteer...be a supporter and join the conversation! PEOPLE+PLACES+ENGAGE. We hope to see you soon.
